Text I:

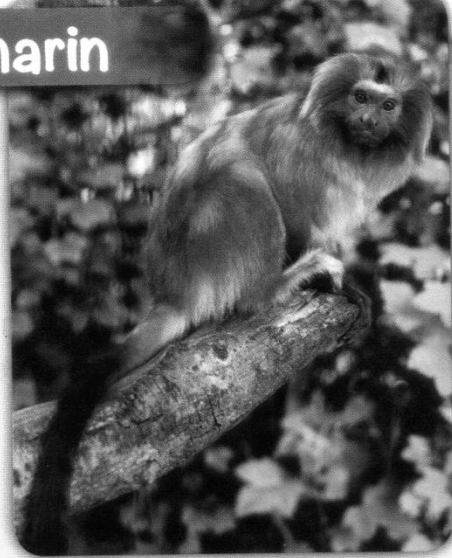

Golden Lion Tamarin

The golden lion tamarin is one of the world's most endangered primates. They are small orange-yellow monkeys, weighing 500 to 600 grams. They live in the (...) coastal region of Brazil (...).

Golden lion tamarins are omnivorous, feeding on fruit, insects, and small lizards. In zoos, (...) they are kept in family groups. In the wild, groups are small (...).

Their habitat has almost disappeared. About 1,500 golden lion tamarins live in the wild, most in or near the Reserva Biológica de Poço das Antas in the state of Rio de Janeiro. About 450 live in zoos worldwide.
